HANNA'S WAVE—WHAT IS IT?

Hanna's wave of prosperity that was prophesied before election does not seem to develop as rapidly as was anticipated. For a few days prior and immediately following election day, there was something of an attempt in Eastern manufacturing centers to increase the force of employees, start up furnaces and set the wheels of factories in motion. It was all a delusion, worse even than that, it was gross and criminal, the deception was practiced on men who had more mouths to feed than their own, and who were easily influenced by reason of their straightened circumstances to accept any offer that would indicate a possibility of relief.

As soon as the returns showed the election of McKinley, fires were banked, wheels stopped and the open doors of factories that had looked so inviting to the working man were closed indefinitely. Men had received the promise of Hanna and his lieutenants in good faith and had fulfilled their part of the contract, but those who made the promises of better times never intended to keep them.

Can it be wondered at under such circumstances that men become desperate, knowing that they have been duped and knowing that their wives and little ones are suffering from the necessities of life while the men who have deceived them are living in luxury and flatter themselves that the ends accomplished are the results of good management and keen political economy. Such men are a far worse element in the country than the worst criminal, for under the guise of respectability they influence and drive men to commit crimes who would lead honest lives if treated decently. This phantom wave of prosperity is sweeping westward and as it strikes town after town, its arrival instead of restoring confidence and making matters easier, is demoralizing, bank failures are of daily occurrence and suicides and crime are becoming epidemic.

The wave struck Colorado and 4,000 men, an army of toilers for their daily bread were turned adrift in the dead of winter without means and in many cases even food.

Although these facts are published on every hand there are still a few people in Nevada who still insist that McKinleyism, Hannanism and goldbugism will save the country, bring prosperity, stamp out anarchy and shelve the misadventured calamity howlers who in most cases are simply crying for bread for those who are dependent upon them.

THE WATER QUESTION.

An adjourned citizen's meeting for the consideration of the water and light question for the town of Reno will be held to-morrow evening at the court-house. The reports of the committees which were appointed and instructed to obtain data and information and present plans will be received. A number of schemes have been suggested, but when carefully looked into there are more or less serious objections to each. The most of these, however, can be overcome and a plan can probably be agreed upon that will be advisable. The greatest obstacle in the way is the money required to carry out the proposed works. A casual observer of such a project has comparatively little idea of the amount of money required to complete even an ordinary water system, and estimates have ranged from $20,000 to $200,000. The latter amount would doubtless be a good beginning, but would probably fall far short of the sum necessary for the completion of a perfect system.

No one will question the value to a community of pure water, and it is hoped that the matter will be carefully considered and a plan adopted that will not simply be experimental and of little use when tried. Public works usually cost a great deal of money and should be made of a permanent character, as a cheap public convenience never lasts and requires constant repairs and is the most expensive in the long run.

SENATOR MORGAN has offered a substitute for the Pacific Railroad bill, in which he provides for a Board of Trustees consisting of nine members, four of them to be selected east of the Mississippi river. A President is to be selected, but none of the board shall be stockholders. They shall be named by the President and confirmed by the Senate, and shall take control of the roads and manage them as a corporation, with a view of settling the debt. Provision is made for a 4 per cent sinking fund, and the whole debt refunded in bonds bearing 3 per cent interest and running thirty years. Senator Morgan claims that under the bill the roads can pay all liabilities in twenty-five years.

JAMES A. WAYMIRE has entered the Senatorial contest at Sacramento. He claims that Perkins' actions toward him have absolved him from any pledge he may have given, and he is in the fight to stay. The Shortridge men are jubilant and it is rumored that a combination has been formed between Waymire and Shortridge to down Perkins.

W. J. Bryan arrived in Chicago yesterday and was met by a committee of the W. J. Bryan League, whose guest he is. He spoke last evening at the Jackson banquet.

Mills Introduces Another Resolution on the Cuban Affair.

FUNDING BILL DEBATE.

A Surveyor-General for Alaska—Black of New York Resigns From the House.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, January 7.—The Senate agreed to adjourn until Monday when the session closed to-day.

The Senate disposed of much routine business at the outset of the session to-day.

Petitions as to Cuba and for and against the Loid bill were exceptionally heavy. One petition from the Commercial Club of Chicago expressed their approval of the present policy of the Administration.

Mills of Texas, a member of the Committee on Foreign Relations, brought forward a new phase of the Cuban question by offering the following joint resolution:

"Resolved, By the Senate and House of Representatives that the expediency of recognizing the independence of a foreign government belongs to Congress, and when Congress shall so determine, the Executive shall act in harmony with the Legislative Department of the Government.

"Second. That the independence of the Republic of Cuba ought to be and is hereby recognized, and the sum of $10,000 is hereby appropriated for the salary and expenses of a Minister to that government, whenever such a Minister shall be appointed by the President."

Mills said he would address the Senate on the resolutions Monday.

The effort by Senator Perkins of California to fix next Wednesday for considering the bill for the Industrial Commission to consider the problems of labor, etc., was defeated to-day by dilatory tactics. The Senate then took up the bill for free homesteads on lands acquired from Indians.

To Call's suggestion that the Cuban question might be brought up then, he replied it was time we gave our own citizens some consideration.

Senator Morgan has offered a substitute for the Pacific Railroad bill which provides for a Board of Trustees, consisting of nine members, four to be appointed from west of the Mississippi river, four east of the river and one who shall be President, whose locality is not specified. These men shall not be stockholders in the roads and shall be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. They shall take control of the roads and manage them as a corporation with a view of settling the debt. Provision is made for a 4 per cent sinking fund. The whole debt is to be refunded in bonds bearing 3 per cent interest, running thirty years.

Senator Morgan says that under his bill the roads can be made to pay all liabilities in twenty-five years. The Senate to-day passed the House bill for the entry of Greer county, Oklahoma, also the Senate bill to grant the State of Washington certain lands for a fish hatchery.

HOUSE.

Despite the fact that the House to-day entered upon the consideration of the Pacific Railroad Funding bill, the attendance on the floor was not large. Great interest, however, was manifested by those present. Maps showing the routes of the Pacific railroads, erected in front of the Speaker's rostrum, were frequently referred to by the speakers.

Under a special order, adopted before the holiday recess, debate will continue until Saturday evening and voting take place Monday.

Before debate began a bill was passed to amend the act providing for civil government in Alaska so as to create a Surveyor-General at $2,000 a year to perform the duties of the registrar and receiver of the General Land office at Sitka.

The resignation of Governor Black of New York as a member of the House was read.

Under special order the House went into a Committee of the Whole (Payne of New York in the chair) and took up the funding bill.

Chairman Powers of the Pacific Railroad Committee said it had been arranged that the time for and against the measure be equally divided, he to control the time in its favor and Hubbard, Representative of Missouri, the member of the committee who made a minority report, against it.

The House confirmed the agreement. Powers then made the opening argument. The bill which the committee reported, he said, constituted a plain business proposition and he asked the members to consider it as such. He described the necessity which existed early in the sixties for a transcontinental railway, the difficulty which beset the undertaking at the time when the South was ablaze with red war, the hopelessness of private capital being able to accomplish anything without Government aid, and the determination of the Government to back the hazardous enterprise by large grants of land and by floating bonds of the road up to $10,000 a mile as far as the Sierras, and $32,000 for a distance across the mountains.

Representative Powers made a long speech thoroughly reviewing the situation from a business point of view. To the question, whether he regarded the bill as a judicious and proper arrangement, he replied in a decided affirmative.

The Government, he said, must act. If not, it would have to pay over $82,000,000 first mortgages, and would get the "inside road" without terminals. The property would be at the mercy of the owners of the terminals. If the present bill passed, the Government would get its money out of the road, and if obliged eventually to take it, would get a railroad and not a part of one. The committee bill squeezed the roads to the last cent. The question was whether the Government should undertake to collect its debts or throw them away, and not a fight between C. P. Huntington and Mr. Sutro.

Hubbard led off for the opposition, and like Powers, plunged into the business aspects of the question. He asserted that the companies were willing to concede better terms, and the bill offered was neither a good nor safe settlement to the Government. The committee, he claimed, had rejected a bill $48,000,000 better for the Government than the present. He discussed several propositions the roads had made to prove his assertion.

THE TARIFF DEBATE.

WASHINGTON, January 7.—The first speaker upon the schedule of woolen manufactures to-day was S. N. D. North of Boston, Secretary of the National Woolen Manufacturers Association. The association, he said, counseled moderation in fixing rates, requesting a moderate protection which would enable them to reopen mills, and with a promise of permanence. Changes were only less evil than rates too low to permit of competition with foreigners. The wool manufacturers suffered more than any other class by the tariff of 1894. The months preceding the tariff revision in 1894, and the two years subsequent, included the most disastrous period to American wool manufacturers. The bulk of woolen and worsted machinery had been wholly or partially idle. At present there was more machinery in operation than during the summer, but the general condition of the manufacturer was bad. The imports of cloths in 1895 ran up to 40,070,000 pounds, almost equal to three years under the McKinley act. The total imports of manufacturers of wool in 1895 were valued at $60,310,000, foreign value. The duty value was $90,000,000, about a third of the value of the woolens made in the mills of the United States in such a year as 1890, and equal to about half the domestic product of 1895. The United States had sufficient machinery, when in operation to supply home consumption.

Imports at low valuations, he said, crowded upon a sluggish market, broke down domestic manufactures, while the foreigners so overdid the business that they, too, suffered from the reaction. The cause was that the quality of the goods was falling so that the unit of value of a pound of imported goods fell from 90 cents in 1894 to 60 cents in 1895.

THE ROOM IN CONFIDENCE.

It Has Caused the People More Trouble Than the Fear of a Depreciated Currency.

EDITOR JOURNAL:—Elect McKinley and confidence will be restored. The wheels of industry will be set in motion and labor will be fully employed. Capital will come out of hiding and prosperity will reign supreme.

The foregoing are some of the promises that were made to the people before the election, but in the light of subsequent events it looks as if McKinley's election was obtained under false pretenses. The rapid increase of business wrecks, strikes, suicides and crime since McKinley's election is frightfully appalling. There has been nearly twice as many business firms go to the wall since McKinley's election as there was for the three years ending December 31st, 1895. There seems to be a serious epidemic of suicide and failures among bankers.

Eckels, who has been predicting prosperity ever since the panic of 1893, claims that the recent failures among banks is due to the weeding out of weak institutions and that the year 1897 will be very prosperous.

Mr. Editor, the predictions of the gold standard advocate is very uncertain. When they predict prosperity the safest thing for the people to do is to prepare for a panic, for nearly every prediction that they have made, since the contraction act of 1866 was passed, has been reversed.

The leaders of the incoming Administration are greatly agitated over the situation. They begin to see trouble ahead. Tom Reed's advice to the people to have confidence and borrow money did not have the desired effect. There was one fact that Mr. Reed overlooked when he gave that advice.

The borrowers property was generally encumbered for about all it would stand and a great many money lenders are opposed to lending with nothing but confidence as security. The general experience of people who profit by confidence and are known as confidence men, is that the fellow who furnishes the confidence must also furnish the money, in that way the so called confidence operator will do business at a profit but the fellow who furnishes the confidence and money loses both at the same time.

A Real Bargain.

"Dear," she said, and her sweetest and most engaging smile illumined her face, "if you had a handsome lap robe, could you use it?"

"Certainly not," he replied. "You know very well that we haven't a vestige of one."

"That's what I thought," she returned, "so I have packed it away. Later, when we are wealthy and keep horses, I can use it."

"Packed it away?" he exclaimed, in a low voice. "Packed what away?"

"Why, the lap robe," she answered.

"But we haven't a lap robe," he protested.

"Oh, yes, we have," she returned.

"It happened to stumble into that department of one of the big stores down town, but they had marked them down so low that I felt I ought to get one of them before the opportunity slipped away."

"But we don't need it!"

"Set now, but we may," she interrupted. "It's just as well to get these things when they can be had at a bargain, and this was a real bargain. You can see very thoughtless about such things. You would never have thought of buying this robe now. You wouldn't have the foresight, but would have waited until you had a horse, and then, very likely, you would have to pay a dollar more for it."—Mercantile Journal.

ELEPHANTS IN INDIA.

No One Allowed to Shoot Them Without Special Permission.

Nobody may shoot an elephant, says the London Telegraph, on the Annamule or Tipperah hills or anywhere else throughout India and Ceylon without permission unless it be a rogue, or plainly dangerous and destructive. The capture of the wild elephant and his careful training are things carried out under an admirable and scientific system, which gives to the administration in all its branches and to the native a superb staff of massive and faithful servants; the commissariat and artillery elephants.

Although they will seldom or never be used for military purposes, elephants are easy to keep and manage, invaluable for many special purposes, and of their demerits whatever they may carry on to the world's stock of ivory. The older is the better generally its quality. But, in any case, how senseless it seems to exterminate the living source of this beautiful commodity, as the reckless hunters and ignorant native chiefs and merchants are still allowed to do in central Africa. When shall we see the government protect, for its very reason, sensible enough, the very much more valuable live elephants, and prohibit that live elephants are very much more valuable even commercially than dead ones, and that the preservation of these stately and serviceable animals shall be henceforward a fixed policy for African benefit?

It has been truly remarked that directly the native and foreign hunters are convinced that one live elephant is worth dozens of tusks they will be as keen to preserve the animal as they now are to exterminate him. We might plead earnestly, even upon the ground of aesthetics and natural science, for the protection in future of the noble beast, whose majesty and tranquillity of mien so well become his stately haunts and philosophic, harmless existence. The ears of these, however, who massacre the innocent giant to cut from him 20 or 30 pounds of material for paper knives and sheathes would be closed to such remonstrances. The best hope of all who understand the value of the elephants for Africa is that even the most selfish of the natives are destroying their own markets. The rest is for official action, tied to do. But certain it is that if decided measures be not promptly taken, we shall see in another continent the shameful human sin and folly perpetuated which has stripped America of every free living vestige of her noble deities of bison.

THE TIPPING QUESTION.

Key It Is Practical at Home and Abroad and the Need For a Reform.

The question of "tipping" seems small enough in detail, but rather important when exaggerated.

A woman who spent last winter in one of the most snug towns of New York, says she invariably gave a quarter to her waiter at breakfast and luncheon, those being meals taken alone. At dinner time she was joined by her husband, who always handed the waiter 50 cents.

The latter sum seemed to overly fill the woman's idea of what was due him, and his "Thank you, sir," was bland and gracious, but the lady's modest quarters always found their grave in the black waistcoat pocket, with no expression of gratitude from the recipient's face, which wore a pleading look, as of one who says, "Women are mean, an never knows 'ow to do the right thing by a man, but one 'as to put up with 'em."

It is only in reckless, good natured America that optional fees are so much larger than they ought to be. A dollar, which is a common enough sum for a man to give at dinner in a fashionable restaurant, would make a French waiter stare, although he would have the presence of mind to pocket it quickly.

In Paris there is an unwritten scale which apportions 5 per cent on the amount of a customer's bill as a tip. Thus a person ordering a dinner that costs $2 would, on settling his bill, add 10 cents for the attendant.

It is time we had either a legal or informal rule governing tips in this country, and it is to be hoped that some rich persons will help on the reform.

It will never be done by those whose means are really small enough to feel the tax, for it is one of the errors of the impugners to feel obliged to show as much liberality as a millionaire, even if, like the guest in "Charles's Aunt," he has to borrow half a dollar from the butler with which to tip him.—Illustrated American.

A Splendid Crown.

One of the most splendid crowns in the world is that of the Russian empress, Anna Ivanovna. According to tradition, it is well proportioned and lightly formed of open gold work, incrustated with a vast number of exquisite gems and among them 2,385 diamonds of great perfection. On its top, serving as a base to a slender cross of pearls, is placed the famous and wonderful ruby which the Russian ambassador purchased at Peking at the price of 120,000 rubles.

The Geranium.

The geranium expresses preference. The idea has not, so far as known, any foundation in history or legend. It is said that Henry VIII first showed marked preference for Anne Bolyn by giving her a bunch of red flowers. Some persons have supposed these flowers to be geraniums, but the plant was little, if at all, known in England at that time.

A fly is almost invincible. It will survive long immersion in water and will sustain the action of sulphur and other disinfectants without apparent injury. Only turpentine, chloroform and ammonia can get the better of a fly.

Diphtheria Cure.
The testimony of a prominent physician:
FOUNTAIN CITY, Ind., June 17, 1896.

This certifies that I have been using V. O. in my practice. I have never found any medical preparation in 46 years of practice that is calculated to do so much good in so wide a range of diseases and leave no after bad effects. In Diphtheria it has proved a perfect specific in my hands, and I had rather depend on it alone in that dreadful disease than the whole popular Materia Medica with that left out.

ANIMALS AND MUSIC.

The Familiar Stable Call Brought the Stampeding Horse Back.
The editor of Thierfreu relates the following story of his own personal experience of the sagacity of military horses. In the year 1872, during a skim-ish with the Sioux Indians, "the Third cavalry regiment had formed an encampment in a valley on the southern border of Dakota. At nightfall the horses were tethered by a long line to the ground. Toward daybreak a violent storm of rain and hail burst over the valley. The terrified animals broke loose from their fastening, and in their fright lay into the steep sides of the valley into the territory of the enemy.
Without horses, at the mercy of the enemy, we should be lost. Yet it was impossible, in the half darkness, to go after them into an unknown country, probably full of Indians. The captain,
as a last resource, ordered the stable call to be sounded. In a few minutes every horse had returned to the encampment, and we were saved."
A gentleman who was a finished musician resided some years ago at Darmstadt and kept a dog, which was the terror of all the singers and instrumentalists in the place, for it had the fatal habit of raising its face to heaven and howling whenever a false note was emitted. It never made a mistake, and well known singers were said to tremble when they saw their unwelcome judge, seated by his master's side, at concerts or at the opera, for Max was a regular fist nighter and a great friend of the theater director. He was never known to miss a new opera. Max was no respecter of persons, and when the singing was but a shade out he would attract the attention of the whole audience to it with a terrific howl. One tenor went so far as to refuse to sing unless the dog was removed, but Max was too great a favorite with the Darmstadt public and such a well known frequen-ter that the singer might as well have requested to have the director himself removed from the stalls, and he was obliged to give in with as good a grace as possible. The dog's master stated that he had trained him when he was quite a puppy, and by the time he was 3 years old the dog was as good a judge as his master of a false note.—Boston
